rights by both government and private agents and such actions should be taken with the full knowledge, consent and participation of the Jarawa themselves ; government policy and relations with settlers alike must be governed by respect for the fundamental right of the tribal people to lead the life they they choose on the land that is rightfully theirs and must be recognized that the State has no right to force a tribal people to abandon its culture or take on an alien most of production, whether in the name of progress, modernization or assimilation into the local or national society.

Mr. Nepuni Piku, Executive Secretary of the International Alliance of Indigenous Trinal Peoples of the Tropical Forests having its office at London and who himself is an indigenous tribe has also raised voice of protest against the attempt of re-settlement of the Jarawas. He has written that the International Alliance of Indigenous and Trinal people of the Tropical Forests is an inter-continental confederation of indigenous and tribal peoples spanning eight regions of the world - Central America and the Caribbean, South America, Anglo-phone Afirca, Franco-Phone Africa, South Asia, South Asia,
