Raja, the Jarawa Boy, Creates History

so that he can raise small gardens of banana, papaya, guava and such other plants and teach his own people how to nurture these plants. This may ultimately, help to set in motion the process of transformation of a food gathering community into food producers. This may even be followed by keeping fowls as an additional food resource.

It may be interesting to know from what source the idea of training up a Jarawa ward boy first camp up -- Anthropology or Tribal Welfare?
